Dear Mr. Anderson:

Olsson has reviewed the Administrative Order issued by the MDNR to Sultany Trucking, LLC and Sultany Farms, LLC on September 18, 2020. The AO was not identified over the course of the Phase I ESA. The notice of violation issued to Sultany Trucking is currently listed on the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (USEPA) ECHO database and is shown as a violation reported in the July-November 2023 Quarter reporting, with no violations reported for any quarters in the past five years. Olsson relies on a third-party compiler of environmental database information – Environmental Data Resources (EDR), an industry standard for obtaining environmental information – as a reliable source of identifying potential environmental issues, including the USEPA ECHO database information. The Sultany Trucking, LLC and Sultany Farms, LLC was not identified on the EDR report generated for this Phase I ESA, nor in the City Directory information obtained, nor in the Owner Questionnaire. Olsson also conducted a standard review of the Missouri Department of Natural Resources environmental databases using the Environmental Site-Tracking and Research Tool (E-START) and did not find any references to any administrative orders or other environmental matters related to the project site.

The historical use of the site as a surface mine does not indicate a recognized environmental condition for the project site.
